I S L A N D

The island in the East End is the place where the Atlantic Ocean meets the land. It is composed of sand and gravel, and is well drained. It is covered with a layer of peat, and is separated from the mainland by a narrow channel. The island is inhabited by a small number of people, who are engaged in fishing and farming. The climate is mild, and the land is fertile. The island is rich in natural resources, and is well suited for the cultivation of crops and the rearing of livestock. The island is a popular destination for tourists, who come to enjoy the natural beauty and historic sites. The island is an important part of the cultural and historical heritage of the region.